

Creating Global Heads with Hearts

From the Principal's Desk

Dear Students,

I hope this message finds you well. As we navigate through challenging times, we must prioritize our health and well-being. Recently, our region has experienced a significant decline in air quality, with the Air Quality Index (AQI) reaching severe levels.

In light of this, I would like to emphasize the importance of engaging in indoor activities to safeguard your health. Poor air quality can have adverse effects on respiratory health and overall well-being. Therefore, I strongly recommend that you limit outdoor activities, especially strenuous exercises, during periods of severe AQI.

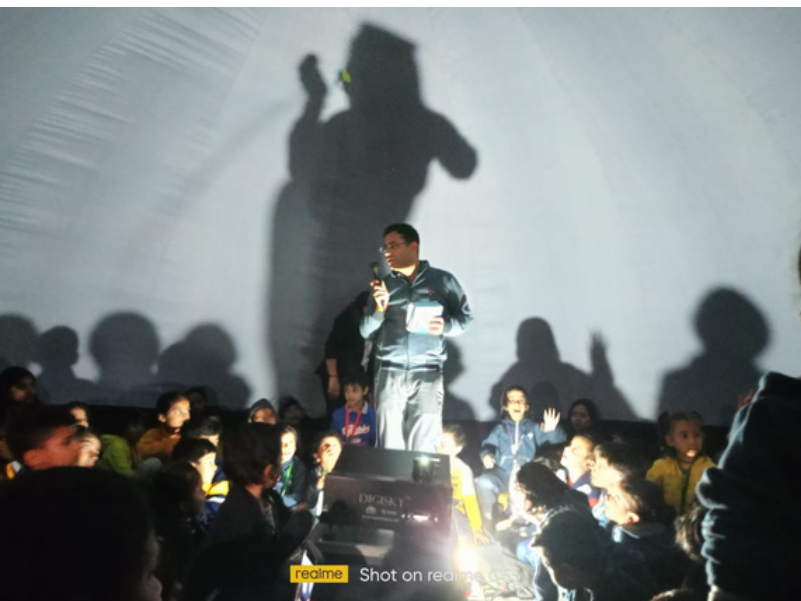

Explore indoor exercise routines such as yoga, Pilates or home workouts to maintain your physical health without exposing yourself to poor air quality. Engage in creative activities such as drawing, painting, writing or playing a musical instrument. These activities not only provide a mental escape but also foster creativity. Practice mindfulness and relaxation techniques, such as meditation or deep breathing exercises, to reduce stress and promote mental well-being.
